

GEORGE D. HEISEY IS APPOINTED POSTMASTER AT NEWARK TODAY

Mr. Ickes Removed on Charges Made By Inspector.

Senator Foraker Says He Wasn't Consulted In the Matter.

As Quarter Ends in March it is Believed the New Post- master Will Take the Office About April 1st-- Advocate First to Receive the News Monday.

Washington, Feb. 27.—President Roosevelt this morning sent the following nomination to the Senate: to be postmaster at Newark, Ohio, George D. Heisey.

Postmaster Joseph M. Ickes is removed from his position on charges filed by a postoffice inspector and it is expected that Mr. Heisey will go into office about April 1, as the quarter year ends in March.

Senator Foraker said today that he was not consulted in the matter and does not know the nature of the charges made against Mr. Ickes. Judge Smyser recommended Mr. Heisey to the President.

The foregoing telegram to the Advocate was received in Newark Monday morning and was promptly telephoned to Mr. Heisey and to Postmaster Ickes. It was the first intimation that either had received of the action of the President, but the news was not unexpected by either.

Postmaster Ickes and Judge Smyser, congressman-elect, of Wooster, are not personal friends. They are just the opposite, and it has been known that Smyser would get Ickes' scalp if he possibly could do so.

Mr. Heisey took a very active interest in Mr. Smyser's campaign and helped him with generous checks at a time when his election seemed very remote. The Advocate said after the election that the Newark postoffice would be his for the asking, and the prediction has been verified. Mr. Heisey was not at first inclined to accept the appointment, but wanted to control it. Finding that he must accept it himself or have nothing to do with it, Mr. Heisey decided last week to take the job. Judge Smyser was here last week and as exclusively told in the Advocate, he agreed to recommend Mr. Heisey for the appointment.

Senator J. B. Foraker had recommended John A. Chilcote and the Newark executive committee had endorsed the candidacy of Earl W. Murphy. Had Judge Smyser failed of election, the appointment would then have been dictated by Senator Foraker and Mr. Chilcote would have received the plum that has just fallen into the lap of Heisey.

Messrs. Addison C. Dickinson, Arthur C. Hatch, Captain William A. Lovett, and possibly others, had their lines out for the appointment, but Judge Smyser's young friend hauled in the prize.

Mr. Heisey is the oldest son of Captain A. H. Heisey. He is about 35 years of age and is associated with his father in the manufacture of table glassware at the Heisey factory in East Newark. Mr. Heisey came from Pittsburg about ten years ago, but some of the friends of other candidates are pointing to the fact that he never voted in Newark until last fall.

Mr. Heisey is a clean and able man. The Advocate Monday morning was the first to offer its congratulations to the new postmaster, but as soon as the news gets about, Mr. Heisey will no doubt be deluged with messages from his many friends.

LINGAFELTER FOUND GUILTY

Jury Returned Verdict After Three Hours' Deliberation Saturday Evening--Defendant Released on Same Bond Pending Motion for New Trial.

Exactly three hours after the jurors left their seats and retired to deliberate on the evidence that had been given them in the case of Ohio vs. James F. Lingafelter, who was charged with forgery, the clerk who read the verdict pronounced the words "guilty as charged in the indictment."

From 2:36 o'clock until the jury announced that they were ready to report Judge Coyner remained about the court house as did Mr. Stillwell, B. G. Smythe and Philip Smythe. Mr. Owen and Mr. Fitzgibbon were not present when the verdict was read.

The foreman of the jury was Frank Allen, a Mt. Vernon grocer. There were six ballots taken. The first resulted 10 for conviction, 2 for acquittal. The second, third, fourth, and fifth resulted 11 for conviction and one for acquittal. The sixth was unanimous.

The juror who held out was Daniel Keller of Pike township. Several of the jurors had no hesitancy in telling of the vote in the jury room.

Mr. Lingafelter took the verdict unmoved as did Mrs. Lingafelter, and they retired to the library room where they were closeted with their attorneys. Neither wished to make any statement.

A motion for a new trial will be made within three days and will be argued at Mt. Vernon next Saturday morning.

In the meantime Lingafelter is under the same bond which he had previously given.

Prosecuting Attorney J. R. Fitzgibbon in regard to the trial of the Lingafelter cases in Mt. Vernon expressed great satisfaction as to the verdicts. It is confident that no reviewing court will reverse the verdict on error and claims that every principle of law is well settled and that Judge Coyner's rulings were uniformly supported by numerous authorities.

As to whether or not he would call up the trials of James Lingafelter on other charges this week, he was not prepared to say, but that he probably would.

Mr. Fitzgibbon's six months' old child is very ill with bronchial pneumonia and the result of this illness will largely determine his action in the matter.

It is a noteworthy fact that in the cases of Robert C. Lingafelter and his father, James F. Lingafelter, exactly the same time was required to convict.

Both were tried on the charge of forgery in connection with the failure of the Homestead Building Association. Robert's case went to the jury about 2:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon, February 18, and three hours later he was declared guilty. The case of Jas. F. went to the jury at 2:36 p. m. Saturday February 25, and exactly three hours later he was found guilty. In the first case eight ballots were taken, in the latter, six.

Both father and son are out on bail pending a motion for a new trial and Judge Coyner next Saturday will hear the case.

MILLIONS LOST

In Fire at the New Orleans Wharves Sunday Night

MAY EXCEED FIVE MILLIONS

Serious Blow at Immense Export Trade of New Orleans--Several People Injured.

(Bulletin.)

New Orleans, Feb. 27.—The loss in the big fire which swept the Illinois Central terminals last night is put today at $4,933,000. The flames are still at work along the river front, a distance of about 11 blocks, but are under control. About 625,000 bushels of corn in the Shuyvesant docks, a big elevator burned, over 22,000 bales of cotton were destroyed and 15,000 barrels of sugar were lost. The flames ate up in addition 100 loaded freight-cars, killed six horses of the fire department, ruined three fire engines and wiped out about a mile of docks and wharves. About 80 families of the laboring class are left homeless. The conflagration is known to have started from friction in elevator machinery.

New Orleans, Feb. 27.—Fire, involving millions of dollars' loss in physical property, and that strikes a serious, if temporary blow at the immense export trade of New Orleans, swept the river front and wiped out the vast freight terminals of the Illinois Central, known as the Shuyvesant docks. Nearly a dozen squares of modern wharves and freight sheds, two magnificent grain elevators, hundreds of loaded cars and vast quantities of freight, including 20,000 bales of cotton, were destroyed, together with a large number of small residences. A number of firemen and employees of the docks were injured. Actual estimates of the losses are impossible, though they may exceed $5,000,000.

The Shuyvesant docks extend from Louisiana avenue almost to Napoleon avenue, a distance of 12 squares. The wharves between these two points were covered with sheds of trackage, and steel and iron sheds ran the whole distance. The two grain elevators were of the most modern construction, the upper one having a capacity of 1,000,000 bushels. Thousands of bales of cotton, several hundred thousands of packages of sugar, great quantities of cottonseed oil and oil cake, lumber and every conceivable variety of freight filled the warehouses and sheds. The fire is said to have resulted from a journal that had not been sufficiently oiled.

Late Estimate on Hot Springs Fire.

Hot Springs, Ark., Feb. 27.—The loss by Saturday's fire is today estimated from one to one and one-half millions. Over 350 houses were swept away. Four fatalities are reported.

AN EXCITING DAY IN THE WHEAT PIT AT CHICAGO

Chicago, Feb. 27.—To the accompaniment of shrieks and howls, the "longs" in wheat went down this morning before the attacks of the "shorts" on the Board of Trade, and the May option sank from 118 3/4 to 114 1/2. In sympathy the July option dropped from 101 3/4 to 99 1/4.

The slump was merely a "traders' panic." When the "longs" attempted to sell a lot of their holdings, the price shot down and none seemed able to stop it until there was a spread of 4 1/2 cents. Then the reaction came and soon May wheat sold at 115 1/4 and July 100 1/2.

No Peace Proposals.

Washington, Feb. 27.—The following official announcement regarding the alleged peace proposals was made by the state department this morning: The government of the United States has never received from the Japanese government any request to lay a proposition of peace before the Russian government, and of course has never in any manner, directly or indirectly, approached the Russian government on the subject.

England cannot get enough cavalry officers under the social code of the British army a cavalry officer must have a considerable income beyond his pay.

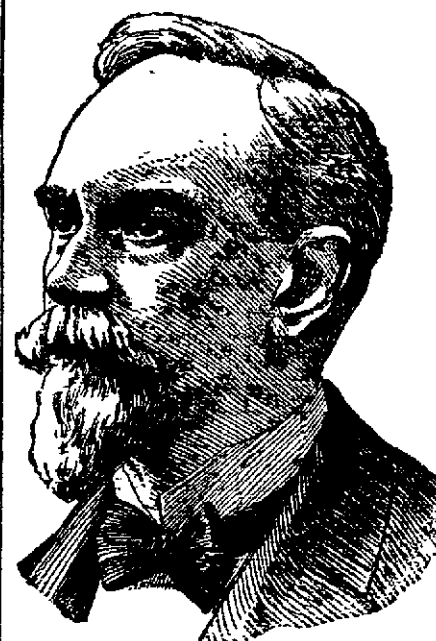

JUDGE SWAYNE

Acquitted Monday By Vote of 51 to 31

IRREGULARITIES CHARGED

But the Senate as Court of Impeachment Did Not Sustain the Accusers.

Washington, Feb. 27.—Promptly at 10 o'clock this morning the Senate resolved itself into a court for the express purpose of voting upon the twelve articles of impeachment found by the House of Representatives against Chas. Swayne, judge of the

CHARLES SWAYNE.

Northern district of Florida, the hearing of which has for over two weeks been occupying from three to four hours each daily session. The galleries were crowded. Every senator was in his seat. The aisles at the sides of the chamber were crowded and the extra seats that had been arranged in the spaces at the rear were occupied by members from the house. Each article was taken up and voted on in order.

Only five of the house managers were present. Judge Swayne, the respondent was not on the floor. He paced up and down the lobby, however, awaiting the verdict that meant so much to him.

The first article, charging the collection from government of money for expenses in excess of that actually expended, the amount being fixed at $230, was read and the presiding officer announced: "Senators, what say you; is Charles Swayne guilty or not guilty of the first article of impeachment?"

As the roll was called each senator arose in his seat, amidst profound silence and declared "guilty," or "not guilty," according to his convictions.

Two-thirds of the senators voting are necessary to convict.

On article one, which charged that Judge Swayne wrongfully collected $230, expenses at $10 a day, for holding court at Waco, Texas, the Senate adjudged him "not guilty" by a vote of 49 to 37. Two Republicans, Kittredge of South Dakota and Nelson of Minn., voted "guilty" and one Democrat, Gibson, of Mont., voted "not guilty." Otherwise the voting was on party lines. Senator Knox of Pennsylvania, was excused from voting on the ground that he had not been able to be present at all the sessions of the trial.

On article two, which charged the wrong collection of $10 a day expenses at other Texas points, the verdict was also "not guilty" by 50 to 32. On article three, a similar charge, the verdict was "not guilty" the vote being 50 to 32.

On article four, charging unlawful free use of private car and transportation on the land convicts, Tampa & Key West railroad, then in the hands of a receiver, the Senate voted "not guilty," 68 to 13. On article five, a number of Democrats who had previously voted "guilty" changed to "not guilty." Article five, a charge of the same charge, resulted "not guilty" 63 to 13. Article six, charging non-residence in his district, resulted "not guilty" 51 to 31.

Article seven, her count of the same charge, "not guilty" 62 to 19. Article eight, charging the unlawful imposition of a fine of $100 and imprisonment of 10 days for contempt of court upon Attorney T. D. Day, "not guilty," 51 to 31.

Article nine, another count of the same charge, "not guilty," 51 to 31. Article 10, charging similar offense in case of Attorney Simon Belden, "not guilty" 51 to 31.

Article 11, another count of the same charge, "not guilty" 51 to 31.

Article 12, similar charges in the case of W. C. O'Neil, "not guilty," 47 to 39.

This completed the call of the various articles. A resolution was forthwith adopted declaring Judge Swayne acquitted and the Senate as a court of impeachment was adjourned sine die.

MANY BURIED

As Result of Explosion in West Virginia Mine

EFFECT FELT A MILE DISTANT

Score of Men Taken Out, Dead the Victims Being Italians and Hungarians.

(Bulletin.)

Welch, W. Va., Feb. 27.—A telephone message this afternoon says the mine fire has been extinguished at Wilcox, and that it has been discovered that the casualties are six instead of 15.

Welch, W. Va., Feb. 27.—Reports from the scene today indicate that the mines of the United States Coal and Coke company, eight miles east, where an explosion occurred yesterday, are a seething mass of flames. The rescuing party has been prevented by the flames from entering for any great distance. It is stated that at least six are known to be dead. There are rumors that the total death list will greatly exceed this. The explosion which was in shaft No. 1, cut off telegraph wire service. The number employed in the shaft where the explosion occurred was about 300, but it is said only a few had entered. All the physicians from here were sent to the scene on a special train.

Bluefield, W. Va., Feb. 27.—More than a score of miners are known to have perished as the result of an explosion in shaft No. 1 of the United States Coal and Coke company at Wilcox.

Fifteen bodies have already been taken from the shaft. A large rescuing party is in the mines. It is barely possible that some of the remaining entombed miners will be rescued alive. The explosion was of terrific force, and shattered glass windows a mile distant. Immediately after the shock great numbers of miners rushed to the shaft to find immense clouds of smoke and dust gushing from its mouth. The officials of the mines, including General Manager Reis, were soon on the ground, and the work of rescuing the imprisoned men was begun. The dead thus far recovered are Italians and Hungarians and have not yet been identified. The company usually works in this shaft about 75 men.

The United States Coal and Coke company, with principal offices in Pittsburg, Pa., is a part of the United States Steel corporation. The cause of the explosion has not yet been determined.

TEN MEN

Arrested for Murder of Un- known Girl at Pater- son, N. J.

Paterson, N. J., Feb. 27.—Ten men have been arrested in connection with the death of an unknown girl, whose half-clothed body was found in a railway ditch in South Paterson Saturday. The body is unclaimed at the morgue and the police are working along the theory that she was drugged and held prisoner in a hut on Garrett Mountain and in attempting to escape from the exposure, she fell exhausted and died of exposure. She is believed to have come to her death in much the same way as Jennie Bosscheitor.

EX-GOVERNOR BOUTWELL DIED MONDAY MORNING

Greenwich, Mass., Feb. 27.—Former Governor George S. Boutwell died this morning of pneumonia. He was for many years secretary of the treasury, a noted lawyer and abolitionist.

FIGHTING FOR A PASS

Brisk Battle is Raging Fifty Miles From Mukden

ADVANTAGE IS THUS FAR ON JAPS' SIDE

Russian Outposts Abandon Positions After Desperate Engagements--Both Sides Sustain Heavy Losses-- Conditions in Russia.

ST. PETERSBURG, Feb. 27.—The situation in Caucasia is rapidly becoming more serious. At Baku today, armed Armenians invaded Melikoff's factory and massacred 42 Russian workmen who refused to participate in the revolutionary movement.

POLICE OPENLY JOIN STRIKERS.

WARSAW, Feb. 27.—The police are openly joining with the striking workmen. Fights between the strikers and troops occurred this morning. One soldier and one policeman were killed and ten policemen were wounded.

CZAR WILL CONTINUE THE WAR.

ST. PETERSBURG, Feb. 27.—The Czar has taken a stand for continuance of the war in the far East. There is every indication that the war will be renewed with great vigor.

FOURTH SQUADRON FOR FAR EAST.

KRONSTADT, RUSSIA, Feb. 27.—The fourth Baltic squadron for the far East, consisting of two battleships, six cruisers, four torpedo destroyers and two transports with other vessels of lighter burden, will begin arming tomorrow for the voyage.

JAPANESE BEGIN CANNONADING.

ST. PETERSBURG, Feb. 27.—General Kuropatkin today reports that the Japanese have commenced cannonading the Russian positions at Goutouline and Cantaulin.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 27.—General Kuropatkin has telegraphed the emperor under date of Feb. 25 as follows: "At 5 o'clock this morning the enemy occupied Tashketchen. Exact reports of our losses have not yet been received. There are 12 officers and about 300 men wounded in the hospital at Sanlunyu. The percentage of killed is very large. The commander of the detachment reports acts of bravery by many detached bodies of troops." General Kuropatkin instances many cases of close fighting and bayonet charges, and concludes: "This morning a battalion of the enemy advanced in the direction of Papin pass, six miles southwest of Sanlunyu, and this evening the enemy's outposts commenced to approach the outposts occupied by us."

The action on the Russian left, as described by General Kuropatkin, is of no mean proportions. The advantage thus far is on the side of the Japanese, though at heavy cost. From advances from the front it is difficult to say how severe the losses have been or how decisive the reverse, and whether the Japanese are likely to attempt to drive in the Russian left much further. General Kuropatkin evidently has been trying to establish his left flank far in advance, to command the crossings of the Taisse river, the operation being a counterpart of General Gripenberg's movement on the right flank to secure the breaking up of the ice in the spring. The scene of the operations is 50 miles southeast of Mukden, beyond Da pass, an important defile commanding the road to Pashun. Both armies occupying apparently inbreachable positions on the centers, General Kuropatkin evidently planned to begin widely sweeping operations on both flanks, but the Japanese countered hard.

Evidence is increasing that the strikes throughout the empire and especially those in St. Petersburg are not economic in their origin, but are inspired by a definite political plan. The government and employers are embarrassed by the tactics of the workmen, whose discontent is being fed and whose demands are increasing with each concession. This condition is believed to have been fomented by political agitators who are stirring up the men and at the same time holding them in a falsely apparently waiting for some sign of concerted action. Fear is entertained that this anti-political action may be connected with a plan to break a possible peasant outbreak in the spring, with which a general strike will be synchronized, the workmen joining hands with the peasants.

Decision of North Sea Court.

Paris, Feb. 27.—The decision in the controversy between Great Britain and Russia arising from the firing on the Game Cock fishing fleet the night of Oct. 21-22 by the Russian Second Pacific squadron, commanded by Vice Admiral Rojestvensky, was officially announced by the international commission of inquiry. The commissioners, as a whole, found that the fishing fleet made no hostile demonstration, and a majority of them that there were no torpedo boats among the fishermen or in the vicinity, and that the opening of fire by Rojestvensky was not justified. The commissioners were unanimously of the opinion that Rojestvensky did all he could personally to prevent the trawlers being fired on, and on the question of his proceeding against giving assistance to the damaged trawlers it was agreed that there was such uncertainty concerning danger to the Russian squadron as to warrant Rojestvensky continuing his course. The general impression among those who heard Admiral Rojestvensky's report was that it was a compromise.

Main Defense Threatened.

Moscow, Feb. 27.—Fighting continues in the north and west of Japan. On the extreme west of the Japanese have taken the leading positions and they now threaten the main defenses. RICHARD MANSFIELD.

HE stage doors of the play houses in which Richard Mansfield and Ada Rehan were appearing in Boston opened on the same street, and the two players met one morning while Mr. Mansfield was hurrying to a rehearsal of "Ivan the Terrible."

"How I should like to see your portrayal of Shylock!" remarked Miss Rehan. "I have waited for a long time to get your conception of the part, but never found an opportunity to do so."

"Come in when I play 'The Merchant of Venice' tomorrow evening," suggested Mr. Mansfield.

"How can I? My acting will keep me busy."

"Would you like to see me act the part now?" asked Mr. Mansfield. Miss Rehan, somewhat surprised, replied in the affirmative. The actor led her to the stage of the theater, where his company had gathered.

"I will defer the rehearsal of 'Ivan the Terrible' until this afternoon," said Mr. Mansfield. "We will play 'The Merchant of Venice' this morning for Miss Rehan."

Thus Shakespeare's comedy was performed in its entirety during the morning, with the distinguished actress as an audience of one.

One night Fritz Scheff gave a party to a few intimates in his apartments. Among the performers were two negro singers who are prominent in vaudeville. They had no idea of the identity of the hostess of the evening. Their ragtime selections made a great hit with the party, which included Maxine Elliott, Ethel Barrymore and Cosmo Gordon Lennox. Miss Scheff suggested that she would like to hear the Pierrot song in the second act of "Babette" synopsized. But the negroes had not heard it. So she sat down at the piano and sang it. The eyes of the colored men expressed some amazement as well as delight at the beautiful voice of the prima donna. After Miss Scheff had sung the number two or three times they reproduced it in ragtime with happy effect. Then the party went on. At the close of the vaudeville entertainment, when the ragtime men were leaving, one of them whispered to Miss Scheff's husband, Baron von Bardeleben: "Say, mister, that wife of yours is all right. If she had her voice cultivated she would be good enough for the stage."

Maclyn Arbuckle of Henry W. Savage's "The County Chairman" company has played many parts during his career on the stage and has ranged from Hamlet down to musical comedy of the slap stick variety. At one time he essayed the part of a loveless tenor in an opera company. A certain high note was quite beyond the reach of Arbuckle, and after several ineffectual efforts to reach it during rehearsal the conductor glared at him and said, "Arbuckle, after this when you come to that note I guess you had better dance it."

"Things that actually occur on the stage are often more ludicrous and startling than the invented incidents of the press agents," said James Young, who is appearing with Miss Viola Allen as Sebastian in "Twelfth Night" and as Florio in "The Winter's Tale." "I was playing a Shakespearean repertoire throughout the south and received an offer of a guarantee to put on 'Hamlet' at the little town of Crisfield, on the eastern shore of Maryland. The theater in Crisfield was not a theater, but a long, narrow hall with a platform at one end for us and rows of benches for the audience. We could use no scenery, but there was certain business of the play that demanded some kind of preparation—namely, the burial of Ophelia. There was no tombstone which to bury her, and yet she must be buried somehow. So preparation was obtained from the local undertaker and the coffin was brought out."

JAMES YOUNG.

A bit of the stage for the purpose of improvising a trap. After this was done we found that it was necessary to go to the ground under the platform and dig good boxes under the stage to hold the trap. The box of dirt was placed in position, the trap was sprung and we were ready for the performance. As it came, the play proceeded, and when we arrived at the burial of Ophelia the trap was taken up, the coffin was placed in it and the curtains were drawn. The audience between the clouds heard only one went with a "stomp of wine," and the first gravedigger, merrily singing, "A pickaxe and a spade," leaped into the open grave, but instead of landing upon the boxes that had been placed there he disappeared. We heard a splash and a yell, for the fellow had jumped into the Chesapeake bay. He was down under the building in impenetrable darkness and splashing water, eight feet deep. The hall was built on piles, and the back extended far out on the shore. During the night a high tide came in and washed the boxes away, together with our useful "props." The poor clown was finally rescued, but it was probably the first time on record that "Hamlet" ever furnished the principal sensation of a modern tank drama.

Sir Henry Irving, at a reception that was tendered to him in Philadelphia by a literary club, narrated some of the memories of his youth.

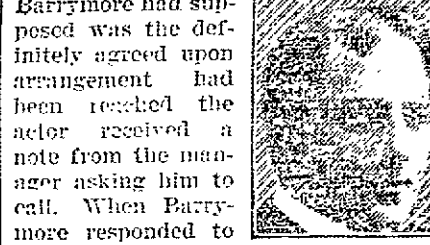

"My formative days," he said, "were very dull, and yet very dear to me now. I recall with particular pleasure a melodrama of crime in high life where with I barnstormed the provinces for two successful seasons a long time ago."

HENRY IRVING.

"My part called in the first act for a dark stage. In this darkness I fought with an old earl, threw him heavily, and when he did not rise after the lord thud of his fall, I cried out: 'Great heavens, what have I done?' 'Usually this scene impressed and moved my audience tremendously, but I remember one night in Birmingham when a coster with one little witticism turned my outcry and the darkness and the old earl's tragic fall into ridicule and laughter. I have never seen that coster, but I remember his voice well. It was a slow, dry voice, like Mark Twain's, and it manifested itself just after the fall of my aged and noble antagonist. The old earl had dropped heavily, and in the silent obscurity I had cried, 'Great heavens, what have I done?' when the coster spoke up: 'Strike a light, young fellow, and we'll have a look!'

Francis Wilson, whose new "Cousin Billy," by Clyde Fitch, is a success in New York, says that Maurice Barrymore once made the rounds of the offices of the theatrical managers in London trying to get them to put on a new play that Barrymore himself had written. One of the managers to whom Barrymore had read the play seemed much impressed. Before their interview had ended, says Harper's Weekly, it had been decided to give the piece an early production and to have Barrymore "do" the leading role. About a week after what Barrymore had supposed was the definite agreement had been reached the actor received a note from the manager asking him to call. When Barrymore responded to the summons the manager said:

FRANCIS WILSON.

"I like the play, old fellow, and I'm going to give it a fine production; but, really, I don't see how I can use you in the east. Your beastly American accent won't do at all, you know. They don't like it here."

"That's odd," said Barrymore. "They tell me on the other side that I won't do on account of my beastly English accent. What on earth am I to do—give recitations on the transatlantic steamers?"

Tody Hamilton, the circus man, tells a story about an English show which had been playing to poor business. Finally the performers, with a tumbler named Zeno at their head, went to the management and insisted on receiving their back pay. They were put off repeatedly. A definite date was at last promised, but the time arrived, and still there was no money. Zeno expostulated, whereupon the management explained that it had begun to pay salaries, commencing with the names beginning with A, and so on, but that the money had run out somewhere in the S's. The company walked home.

A year later Zeno appeared at the office of the circus and asked for an engagement.

"Certainly," said the manager. "We will take you on at an increased salary. Now let me enter your name. Mr. Zeno, is it not?"

"One moment," said the performer. "This year my name is Ajax."

Bruce McRae, the English actor, who is Ethel Barrymore's leading man in her new play, "Sunday," tells a story about an Irishman's experience in a theater fire. When the fire was first discovered Pat was up in the scene left. He yelled "Fire!" then opened a window and went out over the alley, hand over hand, on an electric wire. He held there but a moment, when his legs again, then closed his eyes and dropped. He was placed upon a suspended board, held by ropes and a harness at the foot and in a few days was out on his feet.

BRUCE MCRÆ.

"Way did you drop that?" someone asked him. "You should have waited for a fire!"

"Oh, was afraid the wire had broke," was Pat's reply.

POLLY'S CAREER

By Izola Forrester

Copyright, 1905, by Izola Forrester

"If you would only speak to her, Murray, it might do some good. Her father and I have tried our level best to discover a glimmer of ambition or talent in her, and she hasn't an atom of either. She's nothing but a girl."

Mrs. Allan's hands fell on the wide arms of her rocker with despairing expressiveness. The colonel nodded his head soberly and sympathetically, as befitted the solemnity of the moment.

"She's still very young, isn't she?"

"She's the youngest of all. Bess is thirty. Louise nearly twenty-five and Florence is twenty-one. But look at them! Each one is established in her chosen profession and winning success."

The colonel was silent. Remembering some of Bess' poems, Louise's patients and Florence's copies of old masters, he did not feel that either affirmation or denial was called for.

"And at eighteen they had all decided definitely what they wanted to make of themselves. While Polly—Murray Hartwell, when I asked Polly this morning if she had even the vaguest sort of an inclination toward any occupation in the world, what do you suppose she said? She told me that she hoped some day to be the mother of as many charming daughters as I had, and if they were half as much worry as mine were she thought she would have occupation enough. Murray, are you laughing at me?"

The colonel leaned his head back and laughed heartily in spite of the accusing, reproachful stare of Mrs. Allan's eyes.

"It's just like Polly to say that," he explained. "And, by Jove, I believe she means it too. If I were a little younger—say thirty years—I'd have a try myself and encourage her in her chosen career. By Jove, I would indeed, Cousin Sarah! Polly's a mighty pretty, level headed little girl, and I'll be bound she's a good cook."

"If it were Jack's career that was at stake you wouldn't turn a serious problem of this kind into a joke. What if his only ambition in life were to be married?"

The colonel's face sobered suddenly at the thought. Jack—debonair, twenty-two-year-old Jack—married!

"But it's absurd, Sarah. Jack's a man. It's different. One expects such ideas in a girl's head, the same as a taste for ice cream or rose color or matinees. But Jack is ambitious and talented and well started in his profession now. By Jove, I'm proud of the boy—I am indeed. He's a fine fellow. Takes after me, don't you think? But married?"

The colonel leaned back his head and took another laugh.

"Why, if the young rascal even suggested such a thing I'd fire him back to college or send him down to the mines to work off an attack of romance on the brain."

"And yet you console me for desiring something better for Polly than mere marriage?" Mrs. Allan's tone was ungracious. "I thought surely that you would understand and sympathize with me, Murray, and your influence might possibly direct Polly into making some sort of a choice."

"Wait a minute," the colonel rose from his deep chair near the fire. There was the slam of the front door and the sound of quick, light steps in the hall.

"Come and get warm before you go home, Jack," called a voice. "There's a fire here in the study."

The long, dark man in a patterned waistcoat and dark trousers, tall, blackly youthful and pink as a rosebud where the wind had teased the color to her face. There were scarves clinging to her legs, brown hat and to her feet, but she was merry and happy. She came in, and the two in the study stilled.

"Hello, dad!" Jack's face looked over her shoulder. "Awful glad you're here. We've been for a first class drive, Polly and I."

"I thought that you were upstairs studying the Bess. Polly," said Mrs. Allan, who was as you are here you may as well be in the study and I have been thinking of your career."

"I've given up my long brown fur stole and my hat. I've put on a blue dress and I'm at my feet. The colonel could I and realized that he was expected to speak on the subject. He leaned down upon Polly paternally. He had always liked Polly somewhat better, privately, than Cousin Sarah's more talented daughters.

"Of course you are too young to understand your own capabilities and er—and your lurking talents which you may possess, Polly, but you must not give up or be discouraged. Some of the great geniuses of the world only discovered their gifts at middle age."

"Well, it's a pity some of them didn't die young," said Jack cheerfully.

The colonel ignored the interruption and looked at Polly. He felt the approving attention of Mrs. Allan's eyes.

"But if you can consider the question of a career or should feel any special predilection—"

"That's it," Polly nodded her head until the snowflakes scattered in raindrops from her hat. "That's just what I do feel. Colonel Hartwell—a special predilection."

"For what, in the name of sense, Polly Allan?" Mrs. Allan leaned forward in amazement.

"For Jack," Polly smiled assuredly, and slipped her hand into the one that sought it. "He's going to be the object of my career."

There was a tense silence. The colonel stared frowningly at Mrs. Allan, and Mrs. Allan looked back at him with conflicting sensations. The paramount one was a small but solid sense of amused satisfaction in the colonel's utter discomfiture.

"Shall it be college or the mines, Murray?" she asked.

The colonel squared his shoulders. He had met honorable defeat before and could face it like a soldier and a gentleman.

"Neither, madam, neither. Seeing, as it is, Polly and her career are at stake, I give my consent and wish her all success."

Jack stretched out his disengaged hand.

"You blessed old dad," he said, and the colonel had the honors of war.

Wanted a Big "Bar-L."

A newspaper tells the story of a storekeeper in a country town who, after twice telling a young man that he had no "onions," reverted to the matter after the customer had gone.

"I declare," he said, "I do know but what it was ingans that feller wanted."

A similar tale is told by a young woman who, being in search of a barrel to catch rain water, applied to the village innkeeper.

"Have you a hoghead that I could buy?" she said, with the careful caution that she had learned in childhood.

The innkeeper shook his head.

"Not any sort of hoghead?" she asked, with gentle persistence. "I thought you must have a good many."

"I wonder what set you thinking that?" said the landlord, looking as if he considered her demented. "I haven't kept a single hog for ten years back, and when I did keep 'em I never had any call for their heads."

It was the young woman's turn to look horrified.

"Oh, I don't know anything about hogs' heads," she said excitedly. "I want a hoghead, an old molasses hoghead or something."

The landlord looked at her, and light dawned at last.

"I believe you mean you want a hogshud," he said, smiling broadly. "You step this way and take your choice of what I've got."

A Very Funny Joke.

"The head of our firm had a trying experience one Fourth of July," said a commercial man. "He thought he would play a funny joke on his family, so a day or so before the holiday he bought one of those candy boxes made in imitation of a cannon firecracker. He secreted this in the pantry, where he thought it would be safe."

"But his little son, about eight years old, discovered the firecracker and also discovered that it was filled with candy. He helped himself to the contents and finally, finding the box empty, he made way with it and substituted a real cannon cracker."

"Fourth of July came and the head of the family, smiling broadly, came downstairs and placed his big firecracker in the middle of the breakfast table. Then, regardless of his wife's expostulations, he touched a match to the fuse, never thinking but what it was the candy box on the table."

"His son and heir astutely vanished from the scene about this time. In about thirty seconds there was an explosion that wrecked a once happy breakfast table, and one hour later the worst spanked boy in Detroit had solemnly confessed to an irate father why the joke had failed."—Milwaukee Sentinel.

Old Time Dentistry.

In the early days of dentistry a bickery plug was put into the cavity to fill the space where a tooth ought to be. This plug had to be gently pounded into its desired position. Old Judge Peckham was somewhat addicted to strong language, and when the dentist began his work the judge indulged in some classic comment. As the tapping of the plug continued he threw all dignity to the four winds of heaven, and his language became doubly "more forcible than cleaver." When, however, he arose from the chair, after what seemed to him an interminable period of agony, he pulled out all the stops in his vocabulary for a grand climax. The impression on his listener seems to have been deep and lasting. As the judge passed out the dentist grimly remarked to a waiting patient:

"Wasn't it beautiful? It wasn't really necessary to pound half so long, but I did to enjoy his indignation that I almost pounded the bickery plug into splinters. Wonderful command of language the judge has!"—National Magazine.

A Mountain Tomb

[Copyright, 1904, by T. C. McClure]

While the western terminus of the Union Pacific railroad was still at Cheyenne I started off into the mountains with a companion named John Shayne to prospect for gold.

We had been out for two weeks when signs of Indians became so fresh that we were driven into hiding in a small canyon or ravine making out of a larger one. We kept working back up the dark and narrow way until we had quite reached the end, and as it had now come night and we were in want of food we decided to start a fire.

The bottom of the ravine was covered with leaves and limbs, and we soon had a cheerful blaze going. Soon after the fire was lighted two great wolves rushed past us, going for the mouth. They had come out of a mass of rock at the upper end. Thinking there might be a den there in which others were hiding, we made a torch and inspected the place.

Under a tangle of trees which had fallen from above was the mouth of a cave. It was little larger than the body of a wolf, but when we had eaten our supper we went at it to enlarge the orifice. In the course of an hour we opened the mouth of a great cavern. From the mouth what may be called a wide hallway ran back a distance of a hundred feet, and then we came to the cavern itself.

Its roof was from thirty to forty feet high, and in width and length there was space enough to crowd a thousand people together. We built a fire in the center of the vast apartment that we might have a good view around us, thinking there might be other wild animals lurking about, and when we could see everything we stood amazed and wondered if we could be dreaming.

It was a cavern, a charnel house and a tomb combined. There was not such a thing as a perfect skeleton, but there were hundreds and hundreds of human bones lying about, each one as white as ivory and as clean as a billiard ball. In the center of the cavern were seven or eight heaps of furniture, bedding, clothing and cooking utensils, each one apparently having belonged to a different owner. Leaning against one of the walls were eight rifles, and near them were axes and kegs of powder.

As we looked around and saw these things and handled some of them we could come to but one conclusion. Everything before us had belonged to a party of immigrants making westward over the overland trail. The cave was only ten miles off the trail. There had been some awful tragedy here, and we began looking closer to make it out. The puzzle was soon solved.

The immigrants had either been attacked by Indians and driven to bay in the cavern or had wandered from the trail and taken temporary refuge there. There was no way to tell how long they had been inside when a landslide brought down thousands of tons of debris over the mouth of the cavern and entombed them. Heavy rains had subsequently washed much of it inside, and then the wolves had burrowed through the remainder. The entombed people had made efforts in three or four directions and had broken or worn out their spades and shovels, but they had had to give it up at last. They might have binned their way out with powder at hand, but they were afraid to use it.

We did not go into as rigid an examination that night as curiosity prompted, both of us having a strong feeling of awe in the presence of the relics of the dead, but after a night passed at our campfire outside we returned to the search.

We had noticed four or five wooden chests among the baggage, and our first move in the morning was to inspect these. They contained clothing, bedding, etc., but I had not yet finished with the first when I made an important discovery.

Five years previously a party had been made up in Boone and Jefferson counties, Mo., by a man named Frayne. There were seven families, numbering thirty people, in the party, and after they had progressed as far west as the foothills of the Rockies all trace of them had vanished. Some believed they had been overwhelmed in a cloudburst, others that they had been massacred to the last man by the Indians. In that trunk I found letters and an account book belonging to Frayne himself, and of course they settled the identity of the party.

On the floor of the cave Shayne picked up a blank book which had been used as a diary by one John Martin of the party. It covered a period of two months, dating from the start westward. His jottings were brief, but several of them referred to quarrels and dissensions, and the last one said that they were off the trail and sending out men north and south in hopes to regain it. Two children had died, but all others were well.

It is the general belief that in seeking to find the trail the party were sighted by Indians and retired into the big ravine for shelter. They may have made a stand there; but the Indians proving to strong for them, they retired within the cave, leaving their animals and wagons outside. The animals were shot down and the wagons burned.

The people had plenty of provisions, but there was not one single drop of water to be had. The cave was as dry as a bedroom. Had the wolves not got access to it we should have found everybody as well preserved as if embalmed. We thoroughly explored every foot of wall, and there was not even a damp spot. How many hours or days before the landslide blocked off the entrance no one can say, but it is believed that the Indians brought it about by using powder from above.

OSLER ON AGE LIMIT

Johns Hopkins Man Claims That He Has Been Misquoted and He Makes a Statement.

Baltimore, Feb. 27.—Dr. William Osler of the Johns Hopkins university, whose "age limit" address at the commemorative exercises of the university last Wednesday has been the subject of widespread comment, gave out the following statement: "I have been so misquoted in the papers that I should like to make the following statement: First, I did not say that men at 60 should be chloroformed. That was the point in the novel to which I referred, and on which the plot hinged. Second, nothing in the criticisms have shaken my conviction that the telling work of the world has been done and is done by men under 40 years of age. The exceptions which have been given only illustrate the rule. Third, it would be for the general good if men at 60 were relieved from active work. We should miss the energies of some young-old men, but, on the whole, it would be of the greatest service to the sexagenarii themselves."

To Construct Her Own Warships.

Tokyo, Feb. 27.—The statement cable to the United States from London that Japan has ordered four battleships in England is incorrect. It is probable, unless circumstances dictate otherwise, that Japan in future will construct all her vessels at home. She has equipped extensive yards, shops and gun and armor foundries, and there is a strong and growing sentiment in the navy and among the people generally in favor of home construction exclusively. The yards are already engaged in an extensive building program which includes two large armored vessels.

Gas Exploded.

South McAlester, I. T., Feb. 27.—An explosion of gas in Sample mine No. 2 of the Great Western Coal and Coke company here injured 10 men, one of whom will probably die. The injured: John Murphy, pit boy, face and body burned and head scalded, probably fatally; J. L. Sample, Domestic Farquhar, Budd Robbins, Grant Hare, Jim Cristy, Frank Martin, three Italians.

Infantry Attacks Repulsed.

SKIN DISEASES

Altoona, Pa., June 20, 1903. I was afflicted with Tetter in bad shape. It would appear in blotches as large as my hand, a yellowish color, and scale off. You can imagine how offensive it was. For twelve years I was afflicted with this trouble. At night it was a case of scratch and many times no rest at all. Seeing the good the medicine was doing a friend who was taking it for Eczema, I commenced it, and as a result the eruption began to dry up and disappear, and to-day I am practically a well man. Only two tiny spots are left on the elbow and shin, where once the whole body was affected. I have every confidence in the medicine, and feel sure that in a short time these two remaining spots will disappear. S. S. S. is certainly a great blood purifier, and has done me a world of good. I am grateful for what it has accomplished, and trust that what I have said will lead others who are similarly afflicted to take the remedy and obtain the same good results that I have.

125 East Fifth Ave. JOHN F. LEAR.

While washes, soaps, salves and powders relieve temporarily, they do not reach the real cause of the disease. The blood must be purified before the cure is permanent. S. S. S. contains no potash, arsenic or mineral of any description, but is guaranteed purely vegetable. Send for our book on the skin and its diseases, which is mailed free. Our physicians will cheerfully advise without charge any who write us about their case.

RUMOR REVIVED

That a Skyscraper Will Go Up on the North Side—Story is However,
Not Confirmed.

The fact that Fred G. Spear has announced that he will move his cigar and news store to the Sprague building a few doors west of his present location before April 1, has revived the rumor that a skyscraper will be erected at the corner of Second and North Park Place.

Mr. Spear said Monday afternoon that he knows nothing of the proposed building but he decided to move because he could not obtain a lease on his present quarters. He was obliged to rent from month to month and therefore took advantage of an opportunity to obtain a long term lease on another room.

Granville, O., Feb. 27.—No new de-early Saturday morning. The postoffice inspectors were here on Saturday afternoon and Sunday engaged in checking up, and on completing their work found the total loss footed up $507.

Of this amount $100 was in money, the remainder in stamps. The horse and buggy stolen from Mr. Frank Robinson, has been recovered. It seems that the thieves, after driving as far as they desired, placed the lines over the dashboard of the buggy and started the an-blacksmith shop were stolen to break

The Cancer-Like Growth of Graft.

People in this vicinity, as well as in other sections of the State, have been astounded by the recent publications of the Ohio State Journal, a staunch Republican newspaper, uncovering the florid growth of grafting among the Republican office holders in the Franklin County Court House. In combination with the tax inquisitor put in office some five years ago by the Republican Board of Commissioners, graft to the extent of $50,000 a year or even more has been filched from the tax-ridden people of the county.

Try to think of it! A quarter of million dollars graft in a single county in five years under the regime of Boss Cox.

In forty other counties at least the same sort of rapacious grafting is being carried on. It is to be regretted that there is not a Republican paper in each of these counties that has the courage and the honesty to attack the boss and the result of the boss system that rules Ohio.

Keep Your Eye These Also.

State Auditor Guilbert has turned loose a host of taxpayers, almost as large and quite as ravenous as the locusts that fell upon Egypt, dressed up in the pretty clothes of the special inspectors of public accounts.

They invade every county seat and large town to inspect accounts. When the want to dig a Democrat, they charge that he collected $50 or $100 too much in fees and salaries, which he ought to be compelled to refund. If a Republican office holder happens to be $500 or $1,000 short, the case is reported as merely a misconstruction of the law.

All this would not be particularly noteworthy were it not for the fact that the people of the county have to pay added taxes to give the "inspectors" anywhere from $8 to $15 a day for "expenses" in addition to their regular salaries.

Their chief business, however, is to lay the ropes for Mr. Guilbert's nomination for Governor to succeed Governor Herrick, after he serves his second term, which at this writing, seems doubtful.

LOS ANGELES MAN GROWS GREEN CARNATION

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 27.—Several green carnations were shown in a florist's window here Sunday. The flowers are like other carnations, except that their petals are tinged with vivid green, which radiates from the center to the edge in deep stripes.

A. C. Stiles of 837 West Tenth street has been trying for six years, in California and the East, to produce a green carnation, and last month he succeeded. He refuses to explain how he did it, except to say that prepared soil is used.

He is growing others like it, but the flower will not be put on the market, and the secret of its growth is likely to remain with Stiles.

PAYS TEN THOUSAND DOLLARS FOR PIANO

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 27.—A piano that, so far as known, is the costliest in the world, has just been placed in the music room of Edw. L. Doheny's handsome home in Chester place. It is a concert grand, the case fashioned in Louis XV style and heavily enameled in fourteen carat gold leaf.

More than two years elapsed between placing the order in New York and its delivery in Los Angeles. The instrument is so exquisitely toned that its bell-like clearness and depth of melody would distinguish it instantly among a score of pianos. It cost $10,000.

TO THE DESK

Of Police Captain Indiana Man Walked and Without a Word Swallowed Poison.

Memphis, Tenn., Feb. 27.—Ed Dowd committed suicide in the most dramatic manner Sunday by swallowing the contents of a bottle of carbolic acid in the police station. Going up to the desk he swallowed the poison and laid the bottle down on the desk. He did not utter a word, but writhing with pain he sank to the floor.

Captain Weatherly and Stationhouse Keeper Fitzgerald hurried to his aid. He was placed in a patrol wagon and started for the City Hospital.

Sergeant Couch was urging the horses at a fast speed when the wagon broke down. The breakdown cost Do-war any chances he may have had with the assistance of a stomach pump for he died just as they reached the hospital.

Before leaving the police station Dowd handed Captain Weatherly the following letter without a word. The envelope was addressed to Mrs. Kate Dowd, No. 823 Fourth avenue, Rock Island, Ill., and the letter ran thus: "Good bye, Aggie, Nell and Joe, and all the others, and try to forgive me." Other letters of a similar nature were found on his person at the hospital. The body was turned over to Thompson Bros. undertakers.

Dowd came here from his original home in Lafayette, Ind. several months ago. He was formerly a newspaper man and had worked in Chicago since he left home.

BARE FEET

Touched by the Young Burglar and Awoke the Woman Who Shot Him Fatally.

Lexington, Mass., Feb. 27.—Miss Ottiline S. Alderman, living with her maiden sister, Cora A. Alderman, on Massachusetts avenue, near the Arlington line, shot and fatally wounded a burglar who had entered her sleeping room about 2 o'clock Sunday morning. The intruder was Edward Barrow, 22 years old, of City Mills.

The shooting was done with a single barrel shotgun, the entire charge entering Barrow's abdomen.

Miss Alderman occupied the front chamber of the house. About 2 o'clock she was aroused by Barrow touching her bare feet. He had entered the room by climbing upon the porch and through an open window, and had extinguished the night lamp. She reached for the shotgun which stood beside the head of her bed, and fired. Her sister dressed and gave the alarm. Barrow was brought to a Boston hospital and cannot recover.

AS A WOMAN

Dalmico Disguised Himself and Escaped After Deliberately Murdering His Rival.

New Rochelle, N. Y., Feb. 27.—The police throughout Westchester county are hunting for Pietro Dalmico, an Italian murderer, 23 years old, who Saturday night, after killing his friend and countryman, Carmine Bruno, disguised himself by dressing in woman's clothing and fled.

Dalmico and his victim, with three other men, all Italians, attended a dance in West New Rochelle. Cornerer Wiesendanger learned that the dance was given in honor of a pretty Neapolitan girl, who had just arrived in this country, and that both of her young countrymen were rivals for her hand.

Their jealousy, it is reported, led to a quarrel which broke up the dance, and they agreed to go out and fight a duel.

The other three Italians are believed to have accompanied them as witnesses and to have assisted Dalmico in getting away after he killed his rival.

HOARDED MONEY

If a person hides away a few dollars in a secret drawer or puts them in a small iron safe, does he consider it an expense? If he deposits them and receives credit in his savings bank book, does he class it as an expense? Why is it that so many men look upon a life insurance premium as an expense, and can not be induced to believe that it is not when a person spends money for anything, it passes out of his possession. This is not the case with a life insurance premium. One deposits the money and it is kept for him awhile, and later it is given back again, with more added to it. It never passes out of his possession. It is his money just as much as if it were in a bank, and it is a great deal safer than if deposited in some bank. Give up the idea that insurance is an expense and see it in its true light. There is only one best company. The Equitable Life of New York, and it is the strongest in the world. O. M. and J. R. Tucker, agents.

AMUSEMENTS

COMPLETE IN ITSELF.

It, by any freak of fate the "Quincy Adams Sawyer" company should find itself compelled to give a performance in a hall with but four bare walls and a stage without equipment, there would be no difficulty. The organization carries with it every article necessary to a performance of a play and is accompanied by a complete working force in the mechanical department. Even the electrical apparatus for the elaborate lighting effects employed for the heightening of the scenic illusion, is a part of the company's equipment. One great reason for the satisfaction given by the performances of the famous rural play is that nothing is left to chance in its production. Every detail of the performance is complete and adequate. Auditorium Wednesday, March 1.

"ISLE OF SPICE."

B. C. Whitney's piquant musical comedy, "The Isle of Spice," booked at the Auditorium soon, will no doubt attract wide spread attention among the artlovers, as this attraction comes with an unusual record of city runs, such as 150 nights in Chicago at the La Salle theatre, 150 nights in Boston at the Globe theatre, and 150 nights in New York at the Majestic. From the record of box office receipts, it could have remained in New York much longer had not other arrangements have been previously made for another production at that popular play house.

SHORT NOTES.

Clara Morris, one of the cast of the "Two Orphans," has not allowed her professional tour to interfere with her literary work. No less than ten articles from her pen appear in the mid-winter magazines.

The company playing "The Prince of Pilsen" in common with Mr. Savage's other musical organizations, carries its own orchestra. This system does the composer the fullest justice.

Arthur Judson and Ivar Anderson still have the parts which they created in "The Prince of Pilsen,"—those of the real prince and the naval lieutenant. At Auditorium soon.

James O'Neill, who is one of the galaxy of stars who will appear in the all star revival of the "Two Orphans," at the Auditorium soon, is a firm believer in all-star combinations and is enthusiastic regarding the present revival of "The Two Orphans."

The success that the organization has met with everywhere has prompted Mr. O'Neill to make arrangements for revivals on a big scale of several of his old successes next season, notably "Monte Cristo" and "The Three Guardsmen."

THE GREAT SOUTHERN.

This week's offering at the Great Southern theatre, Columbus, is made up of two attractions which have been accepted by Eastern cities with much acclaim and while widely differing in character can well be said to represent the best of the season's offerings. On Wednesday afternoon and evening, George M. Cohan and a large company present that brilliant young man's newest creation, "Little Johnny Jones." The book, songs and music were all written by Mr. Cohan and he also staged the production and plays one of the leading parts in it. In a year of few New York successes, it is a distinct triumph for a young man 26 years old to have contributed one of the most refreshingly original productions that have been seen in New York in several seasons. This might have been expected of a man who at 20 wrote such a capital comedy as the "Governor's Son," who a little later wrote "Running for Office," and has since written, literally, hundreds of vaudeville sketches and the words and music to some of the most popular songs of the past few years. "Little Johnny Jones" is said to be well worth seeing and it is not hard to believe this advice good when you remember the work of the Fort Cohans and know that Tom Lewis, Truly Shattuck and Ethel Levy are in the cast.

On Friday and Saturday with a matinee on Saturday, Mr. Odis Skinner appears in Jean Richopins' beautiful play "The Harvester" and to lovers of the artistic nothing better will be offered this year. Mr. Skinner is always an artist and he has never had more ample opportunity of demonstrating this fact than is given him in "The Harvester." The scene is laid in Canada and the characters are French Canadians. More beautiful pictures have rarely been seen on the stage than that of the blossoming apple orchard being swept by a storm, and the fields of grain being harvested. The chief character is a wandering gypsy harvester who is a typical happy-go-lucky, picturesque vagabond and a more artistic performance than Mr. Skinner's work in this part has not been seen on the stage in many a day. Mr. Skinner is surrounded by a capable company.

DAVID COPPERFIELD

Will be the Subject of Leland T. Powers' Lecture Thursday Night at the Y. M. C. A.

On Thursday evening of this week Leland T. Powers America's master impersonator, will present "David Copperfield," in the Y. M. C. A. course at Taylor Hall.

That Mr. Powers is a masterful interpreter of characters in dramatic literature everyone who has seen his "Macawber," his "Heep," his "Beaucaire," his "David Garrick," or his "Cyrano" will gladly maintain.

By a large majority of the patrons of this years Y. M. C. A. course voted to have him give "David Copperfield."

Reserved Seats for all who do not hold course tickets are now on sale at the Y. M. C. A. office.

AT TAYLOR HALL

Ithaca Conservatory of Music Quartet Gave a Delightful Entertainment Saturday Evening.

The Ithaca Conservatory of Music Male Quartet gave a most delightful entertainment at Taylor Hall, Saturday evening. Not only did they show fine training in the perfect execution and harmony of the quartet numbers, but the solos by the different members were excellently rendered.

Mr. Johnson's fine tenor voice showed to excellent advantage in the song "Mona" by Adams. For an encore he sang "It is Enough."

Mr. Bottsford possesses a rich second tenor voice. His rendition of "For all Eternity" was one of the best features of the evening's program.

The basso, Mr. Odbert, gave two numbers, "Slumber Boat Song," and "Good Night, Little Girl, Good Night," both of which received hearty encores.

A very pleasing feature of the evening's entertainment were the readings by Mr. Wilson, who also sings first bass in the quartet.

His first number "An Old Sweetheart of Mine," by Riley, recited to musical accompaniment, was very excellently done. "In the Catacombs" a humorous selection, called forth a most hearty encore.

The concert was high class throughout and deserving a much larger audience than was present Saturday evening.

AT A WEDDING

Tragedy Occurred in Greensburg, Pa. Bloody Battle Lasted for an Hour—Many Arrests.

Greensburg, Pa., Feb. 27.—Anna Onafrey was the central figure in a bloody battle at the Strickler works of the Veteran Coal company, in Mount Pleasant township, in which two men were killed and six others stabbed, shot or slashed with knives. The wife, Michael Leskow, 30, leaves a wife and two children in the old country. Of the wounded Tom Poliak may die. Anna Onafrey's refusal to dance with George Lukes, an unbidden guest at a wedding celebration, started a riot. Large quantities of beer and whisky had been provided for the entertainment of the guests. Lukes thereupon made himself obnoxious and the host attempted to eject Lukes. Lukes, knocked the host down and then left, going to his boarding house, where he gathered a party of his friends and with them forced his way back into the dancing room. A fierce hand-to-hand fight followed, pistols and cokes forks being used. The battle lasted nearly an hour. Twenty-seven arrests were made.

INAUGURAL BALL

MRS. ROOSEVELT'S GOWN IS TO COST ABOUT $1200.

Creation of Gold Brocade Taffeta and Chiffon is Being Made in the City of New York.

New York, Feb. 27.—Whatever may be the center of interest for the masculine half of the throng who will attend the inaugural ball at Washington next Saturday night, it is certain that the matter of imperative importance to its wives, sisters and sweethearts will be Mrs. Roosevelt's gown. No other creation of the dressmaker's art occupies quite so distinguished a position this year.

At the last inaugural ball, when Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt were second in the pageant, her gown was a simple affair of white silk and duchesse lace. This year her dress will be again distinguished by its dignified simplicity.

It is to be brocade and chiffon of electric blue, trimmed with old lace. The brocade from which both waist and skirt are made is woven in a pattern of golden feathers in medallions on a soft blue ground. At intervals among the medallions are small figures of flying birds.

The pattern was especially designed and woven by a Patterson silk manufacturer and after the quantity needed had been woven the design was destroyed. This will therefore be the only gown of this pattern in existence.

The skirt is cut long, full and with a wide circular sweep. It measures seventy-eight inches from the back of the girdle to the tip of the train and contains about thirty yards of brocade.

It is plain on the exterior, but twenty yards of taffeta silk and chiffon of the same shade go to elaborate the lining, in which are rows upon rows of silk and chiffon pleatings half way to the girdle. At the edge is a three-inch puffing also of chiffon.

The petticoat is of taffeta, with the lower half given up to numerous rows of silk and chiffon pleatings, similar to those on the skirt. Twenty yards more of chiffon and taffeta are consumed in the petticoat.

The bodice is a Louis XV long pointed affair. It is cut square in the neck, with a tucker of shirred chiffon across the front. The shoulders are trimmed with old lace in round point, of a beautiful design, an heirloom in Mrs. Roosevelt's family. The small sleeves are simple frills of pleated chiffon.

Slippers and stockings of the same shade will be worn with the gown and a feather in the hair, also of electric blue, will complete the toilet.

All the materials are of home manufacture, in accordance with Mrs. Roosevelt's rule. There will be used in all over one hundred yards of chiffon and forty yards of taffeta.

The materials cost upward of $700 and the whole costume complete will cost about $1200. It is now being finished in this city, and will be sent to Washington on Tuesday.

UNABLE

To Throw Up the Old Job Negro Postmaster Accuses the Government of Peonage.

Jackson, Miss., Feb. 27.—A. L. Horton, a negro postmaster at Way Station, Madison county, a small village about 25 miles north of here on the line of the Illinois Central railroad, makes the sensational charge that he is being held in peonage by the Postoffice Department.

Horton has been postmaster at the place for several years, and has frequently attempted to resign, the last effort of this sort being only a few weeks ago, but the Postoffice department refused to accept the resignation, for the reason that no other person can be found in the community who is willing to take the office, and several of them have written to the Postmaster General insisting that Horton be retained.

The negro is very much in earnest over the charge preferred against the Postoffice Department, and has written a letter to the Federal authorities here asking if there is not some hook or crook of the law by which he can quit the job without rendering his bondsman liable.

He indignantly asserts that the Postmaster General is holding him in involuntary servitude, and that he is losing money by serving as postmaster. The case is without a parallel in this state, and the Federal authorities are very much puzzled over it.

The national airs of great countries are short, while those of little countries are long. "God Save the King" is 14 bars, the Russian hymn is 16 bars and "Hail, Columbia" has 28 bars, and that of Uruguay 70, Chili 46, and so on. San Marino has the longest national hymn, except that of China.

NEWARK'S BIG DEPARTMENT STORE

The Best Lot Proposition Ever Offered to The Citizens of Newark

Owing to the fact that a number of citizens of Newark have expressed a desire to buy lots adjoining the new United States Navy Yard, about five miles from Charleston, South Carolina, from Messrs. Bolton and Wilcox, a number of them will be placed on sale. Those who take the trouble to investigate will find it the best lot proposition ever offered in the City of Newark. There will be twenty millions spent to complete this yard, and about four thousand men employed or as many men as are employed in all the shops in Newark combined. The first mechanics to the number of five hundred will be sent there this fall upon the completion of the dry dock. Sewer, water and granolithic sidewalks are guaranteed on each street. The gate of the Navy Yard opens into this property and the electric car line runs through the entire length of the property, to the Navy Yard gate. These lots will be sold on payment of ten dollars a month without interest or taxes until paid for. Your money cannot help doubling itself in a short time, as the history of all Navy Yards has been that they have made large cities in a few years. We have made contracts with a number of Newark people to go there to work on this property. Those desiring to buy lots may call on us at 14 1-2 North Second street or buy them from the agents we have appointed. Office open evenings.

POACHER NETS

FOUND IN BUCKEYE LAKE BY THE STATE GAME WARDEN.

Porterfield Fell Into Ice Water, but Deputy Came to Rescue—Ice is 16 Inches Thick.

In a raid made Saturday at Buckeye Lake, State Game Warden J. C. Porterfield and three deputies, Chas. Heyl, J. W. Bailey and H. P. Spencer, confiscated 27 nets from all but one of the nets releasing quantities of fish. No arrests were made.

The task of taking the nets was an arduous one, since the ice had to be cut through and the nets fished out by long poles with iron hoops. It was in this part of the work that Game Warden Porterfield almost came to his undoing.

In working about one of the holes he stepped on a weak piece of the ice, and before he could save himself was struggling in the icy water.

The deputies at once rushed to rescue him. Deputy Bailey was the first to reach the spot, and soon had the warden out of the water. He was at once hurried over to a fire, where he soon recovered from the ill effects of his plunge, and in a short time was able to return to the work.

The lake was some over from one end to the other, and though no arrests were made, the raid was of importance in the number of nets confiscated, and the amount of fish released.

The ice on the lake averages no less than 16 inches in thickness.

A few weeks ago a raid was made by the state game warden and a large number of nets were found full of fish.

Frank D. Hall, Druggist, Offers the People of Newark Vinol, Body-Building, Strengthening and Healing Medicine.

We have a warranted cure for a thin, tired, debilitated, nervous people. It is Vinol, the most delicious and valuable preparation of cod liver oil ever discovered. Vinol tones up the digestive organs, cures all stomach troubles, makes rich, red blood, creates strength, and builds up firm, healthy flesh.

Mr. Frank Graves, a lawyer of Winoski, Vt., writes: "Permit me to say a word in your honor for the peerless merits of your cod liver oil preparation, Vinol. I was in very poor health when I bought my first bottle of Vinol, and I wish every sufferer could see what it has done for me. It brought back my appetite, put flesh on my bones, strengthened my nervous system and toned up my whole physical condition. Vinol simply did wonders for me."

As we have so often stated in these columns, Vinol is the greatest strength creator known to medicine, and we do not believe there is a person in this vicinity but what Vinol will benefit at this season of the year; if never fails to make the weak strong and the sick well.

Vinol is as valuable for all hacking coughs, chronic colds, throat and bronchial troubles, and we return money if it fails. Frank D. Hall.

CITIZENS LEGION

Annual Banquet at Kuster's—Legion Has Finest Indoor Rifle Range in the State.

The Citizen Legion Rifle Corps held its annual banquet on February 22 at Kuster's. An elegant spread was served and the occasion was a most enjoyable one.

Speeches were made by Major Steele, Adjutant J. C. Schindler, Chaplain L. S. Boyce, Lieutenant J. V. Hilliard, and others.

The objects of the corps, the past work, and future plans were discussed. The following interesting things were said:

The main object of the Rifle Corps is to create and maintain a corps of skilled riflemen, organized into small efficient team groups distributed over the United States. These groups to form units of one large and completely organized body of loyal, patriotic, intelligent men, taught in time of peace to use the military rifle, and drilled and disciplined in the simple but effective school of the team group, which will make the organization a national guard of so great a value that every service rendered for its advancement will be an act of patriotism.

Its further objects are the defense of the National Government against all armed foes of strength too great to be repulsed by the Regular Army, National Guard, and first line of volunteers, and to strengthen the prestige of the United States by the known fact that back of the general government and its first line of defense stands a great body of skilled and well organized riflemen able and ready to repulse an invading army. The Corps has been divided into two Team Groups.

During 1904 a total of over thirteen thousand shots have been fired, which added to the seven thousand fired the previous fall make a handsome total of over twenty thousand shots.

There has been much improvement in the quality of the marksmanship and the knowledge of military shooting. All firing has been at reduced or full sized military targets.

The Corps has the most complete indoor rifle range in the State. It is located in the Armory of Company G, and consists of nine targets backed oak and iron plates. One plate is of 5-8 steel and will hold Grade fire. For night shooting two reflector lamps shine on each target, giving a fine clear view of the targets. Military targets for all ranges from 10 yards to one mile, twelve in all, are used. They are accurately scaled to a reduced range of fifty feet—that is, each target at fifty feet in front of the marksman's eye would appear just as large as its full sized target at full distance.

Each marksman's rating for the season is made up by adding his best ten shot score at each of the twelve ranges. The possible score is 600 points.

The following is a list of those who have made over 80 per cent of the possible 600 points:

F. G. Steele	565
L. J. Wise	564
C. E. Orr	564
M. R. Olsen	532
E. Eakin	527
A. R. Evans	523
F. L. Paulson	514
F. Davis	514
W. F. Kaiser	504
OVER 75 PER CENT.
John Mohlenpach	467
G. S. Conway	456

The Corps owns several fine rifles and an Officer's Model revolver of 28-cal. and 6-in. barrel. It is an excellent arm. Quite an interest is developing in revolver shooting. The outlook for the Corps is encouraging.

The Legion Rifle Corps is doing a good work and should be extended all over the country and given generous encouragement by our citizens.

He lost the face and hands. The explosion occurred at the meter house on the John Simmons farm. Just how the gas got there is a mystery. Mr. Wood was working about the building at the time. He came here last fall from St. Louis. The line is a four inch one and is owned by the Logan company, which is a subsidiary of the property of the Denham company. The meter house was destroyed.

TABLET

IN MEMORY OF REV. R. R. MOORE UNVEILED SUNDAY.

Several Addresses and Special Music Constituted Program at First Presbyterian Church.

A bronze memorial tablet with the following inscription, dedicated to the memory of Rev. Robert Ralston Moore, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, of this city, some twenty years ago, has been erected to his memory on the walls of that church, and was formally unveiled and dedicated Sunday.

In Memory of
REV. ROBERT RALSTON MOORE
1830-1901.
Pastor of This Church
1879-1885.
Entered into Life.

The exercises, which took the place of the morning session, were very impressive and beautiful. A special program of music had been prepared for the occasion.

Rev. L. S. Boyce, the present pastor of the church, delivered the first memorial address, in which he paid a number of short tributes to the memory of Rev. Mr. Moore, received from fellow pastors over the state who knew him in life.

Rev. Henry Fulton then followed with a brief but appropriate address, based upon the text, "Though Dead, He Yet Speaketh," in connection with which he paid a fitting tribute to the departed pastor.

Rev. Mr. Boyce then made a formal statement of the dedication of the tablet, and the veiling covering it was removed by Deacon Henry Cordray in a very impressive manner.

Judge E. M. P. Brister then closed the formal exercises of the unveiling in a brief address on behalf of the laity of the church, in which he paid a feeling tribute to the usefulness of the departed pastor and emphasized the thought of every life that is rightly lived being worthy of a memorial.

The exercises throughout were very appropriate and beautiful, and showed the high respect and affection in which Rev. R. R. Moore was held by his congregation and by all who knew him.

INCREASE NOTED

In Number of Fatalities in the Anthracite Coal Region—Appalling Loss of Life.

Scranton, Pa., Feb. 27.—Notwithstanding the fact that the production of anthracite coal in Lackawanna county was less last year than in the preceding year, the loss of life in connection with the industry increased in a manner that was appalling, notwithstanding that there were additional inspectors and that more rigid precautions had been inaugurated. The reports for the last year show that there were 55 fatalities from fall of roof and rock alone, while in the preceding year, with a greater output, the fatalities from these causes were 64. The total lives lost in the mines of Lackawanna county in 1904, with its decreased output there, were 127. The year 1905 will probably show a record still worse. The first six weeks resulted in 68 fatalities in the anthracite mines of the whole field.

Nat Jones' Body.

Paris, Feb. 27.—A preliminary examination which Ambassador Porter is making for the body of John Paul Jones, the naval hero of the revolutionary war, recently disclosed a lead coffin. The name plate on the coffin was very much corroded, but the inscription has finally been deciphered, showing that it was the coffin of an Englishman buried May 3, 1790, two years before the death of Jones. Consequently the coffin will not be opened. The examination continues.

Dyspepsia of Women

ABSOLUTELY NEEDLESS AGONY

Caused by Uterine Disorders and Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

A great many women suffer with a form of indigestion or dyspepsia which does not seem to yield to ordinary treatment. While the symptoms seem to be similar to those of ordinary indigestion, yet the medicines universally prescribed do not seem to restore the patient's normal condition.

Mrs. Pinkham claims that there is a kind of dyspepsia that is caused by a derangement of the female organism, and which, while it causes a disturbance similar to ordinary indigestion, cannot be relieved without a medicine which not only acts as a stomach tonic, but has peculiar uterine-tonic effects also.

As proof of this theory we call attention to the case of Mrs. Maggie Wright, Brooklyn, N. Y., who was completely cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound after everything else had failed. She writes:

"For two years I suffered with dyspepsia, which so degenerated my entire system that I was unable to attend to my daily duties. I felt weak and nervous, and nothing that I ate tasted good and it caused a disturbance in my stomach. I tried different dyspepsia cures, but nothing seemed to help me. I was advised to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial, and was happily surprised to find that it acted like a fine tonic, and in a few days I began to enjoy and properly digest my food. My recovery was rapid, and in five weeks I was a well woman. I have recommended it to many suffering women."

No other medicine in the world has received such widespread and unqualified endorsement, or has such a record of cures of female troubles, as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Bowser Tries to Box

Plans to Knock Out a Sickly Neighbor as Huge Joke and Is in High Glee—Mrs. B. Warns Victim Her Spouse Hits Hard—Latter Gets a Surprise.

(Copyright, 1905, by T. C. McClure.)

WHEN Mr. Bowser reached home the other evening he was smiling. As he took off his overcoat he chuckled. As Mrs. Bowser came out into the hall to greet him he burst into a hearty laugh. She had rather expected him to come home that evening and demand to see the gas bill and declare that she was burning too much coal and that there were half a dozen extravaganzas that must be cut out, and her surprise over his great good nature made her speechless for a moment. Then she asked:

"Has anything happened?"

"Nothing so very great," he replied, "but there's a little event to come off in a couple of hours from now that will make even the old cat laugh. Ha, ha, ha!"

"I haven't heard you laugh so heartily in a dog's age. What event is coming off? If you brought that grin all the way home with you folks must have concluded that you had drawn the capital prize in a lottery."

"You don't know Wilkins," said Mr. Bowser as they got seated at the dinner table. "He lives four or five blocks below us and has an office next to mine. He is a tall, lathy gandersbank, and he thinks he's got incipient consumption. He has begun to take exercise to broaden his chest. He—he—Ha, ha, ha!"

"Are you laughing at his consumption?"

"No, of course not. He wants to take boxing lessons with it, and he came to me today to learn if I knew anything of the art. I told him I could box a little bit, and he's coming up here tonight to get a few lessons. Yes, he—he's—"

"I don't see where the laugh comes in," said Mrs. Bowser as Mr. Bowser had another fit of laughter.

"Then I'll tell you. You remember when I had a teacher, don't you? Well, one night he hauled off and knocked am, and she was afraid I might damage your husband. Perhaps we'd better call it off."

"Hear him!" exclaimed Mr. Bowser as he slapped his leg and chuckled all over. "I was telling Mrs. Bowser that I guessed I had better tie my hands behind my back and let you do all the hitting, and here you are afraid for me! Well, that's funny!"

Mrs. Bowser couldn't make Mr. Wilkins out. He was either an amateur with a head of confidence back of him or he understood himself and had an object in view. She therefore had nothing further to say, and the men disappeared upstairs. What occurred up there she will never fully understand, as neither man went into particulars. When they had reached the garret and were stripping for the fray Mr. Bowser uttered a chuckle and said:

"Now, Wilkins, if I get to going too hard you must call out."

"Oh, certainly," was the reply, "and I shall expect you to do the same. I shouldn't want to lay you up for two or three days."

"Lay me up! Ha, ha, ha! Say, Wilkins, you are something of a humorist in your way. We'll time ourselves as near as we can for three minute rounds, and if you feel like warming up come for me as hot as you please."

"But I shall be careful not to hurt you. Your wife seemed rather anxious on that point."

"Oh, she did, eh? Ha, ha, ha! By George, but I haven't enjoyed myself as well in a while! Are you ready? Then, one—two—three!"

Mr. Wilkins squared off like a novice and used his arms like an old woman, and Mr. Bowser had to stop now and then to laugh. The round closed without anybody having been hurt, and when they stood up for the next Mr. Bowser went in to make it a rattler. To his great surprise his visitor managed to ward or dodge all his blows, but by such awkwardness that it called for smiles all the time. The third

SARTORIAL ITEMS.

Colors For Mousquetaire Gloves, Elastic Instead of Buttons.

The short white glove is considered provincial among well dressed women. Even for long sleeves that have transparent deep cuffs the suede mousquetaire glove is pulled over them to the elbow.

In suede mousquetaire the colors most approved are tans and grays. Black and white gloves are only worn with costumes they match. The grays and tans are allied with gowns of all colors when worn with a hat.

The best makes of mousquetaire gloves are without buttons. They pull on easily over the hand and are worn well wrinkled.

Glove gloves are kept for shopping and traveling wear.

There is a new glove which has elastic at the top instead of buttons. They are convenient to don, but have not the neat and smart appearance of a buttoned glove.

With the low hairdressing in vogue there is a great demand for attractive hair ornaments. Back and side combs will be, of course, in vogue, and there are any number of lovely tortoise shell and amber pins for the hair.

The newest idea in hupkins is the safety pin to keep the hat in position. This pin is very long and has besides the regulation fastening arrangement that fits down firmly into the hair, the snap being adjusted through the folds of the millinery.

The frock illustrated is of blue chine silk. A very decorative ribbon trimming ornaments the skirt. The waist simulates a bolero and is slightly surplined in front. The girle and band about the neck of the bodice are of tan suede trimmed with a ribbon design.

FASHION FACT AND FANCIES.

Three Piece Linen Suits a Fad—Floral Effects Are Smart.

Three piece costumes of the finest kind of white linen are the last fashion cry. The costume consists of a long skirt and two bodices, one low and the other high, both made with elbow sleeves. They are beautifully inserted with Valenciennes lace and embroidered by hand in floral designs over lace and linen. The low waist depends for adornment upon an exquisite wrought bertha. The high waist is of the usual dainty fingerie style.

Among the jewelry novelties is a dog collar of jet.

Corset covers fashioned entirely of insertion are worn with slips of fine linen or lawn.

Floral effects promise to outlive all other spring designs and are to be seen on all sorts of materials.

There is a new linen scattered with small blossoms that will be very smart.

The old chine silk of long ago is again fashionable, the smartest colors in this silk being chrysoprase green and Du Barry rose.

TRIBUTES TO JAY COOKE

Recollections of Friends Who Knew the Financier.

ALWAYS GENEROUS TO THE NEEDY

For Years He Maintained a Special Fund For Their Relief—Stories About His Integrity—How He Regained His Fortune—Aiding the Government at Lincoln's Death.

Scattered all through the Third street district of Philadelphia are men who in a greater or less degree were in business relationship with the late Jay Cooke in the most notable years of the famous financier's life, says the Philadelphia Public Ledger. Many of them were his clerks in the great banking house that stood for so much in the course of the struggle for national unity from 1861 to 1865. Stephen W. White, now secretary of the Northern Central Railway company, was private secretary to Mr. Cooke. He was at Mr. Cooke's right hand during the panic period of 1873, when Mr. Cooke's immense fortune, won in serving his country's interests, was engulfed in a day.

"Mr. Cooke's greatest sorrow," said Mr. White, "was for the poor people who would suffer. He was always generous to the needy. For years he maintained a special fund for their relief, formed by the setting aside of a full title of the profits of the banking house. The clerks dubbed it the 'Old Patriarch Jacob fund,' and the initials 'O. P. J. fund' were used to designate it in the accounts."

"Mr. Cooke made sunshine for all around him. His clerks all loved him, as the younger men of a tribe in the ancient days might have loved its patriarch and head. When he was in the office their cheerfulness was always greater than at other times. In the days of great financial stress, when he alone remained calm and courageous, they were disconsolate if he was absent."

George C. Thomas, the retired banker, once a partner of Mr. Cooke's and intimately acquainted with every detail of the great financier's resourcefulness in negotiating government loans during the civil war, says that the United States owes a debt of gratitude to Jay Cooke which it is impossible to overestimate.

"I consider it a great privilege," said Mr. Thomas, "to give this testimony. I was a clerk in Mr. Cooke's bank through the whole period of his agency in placing government loans, which was in itself a great experience. He succeeded in this very largely by taking the people into his confidence. He made a popular subscription to the national loan, having brought before the people part of the old 6 per cent loan, which became due in 1881; the first 5-20s, a 6 per cent loan, redeemable in five years and payable in twenty years; the 10-40s, of similar nature, bearing interest at 5 per cent, and three issues of 7.5 per cent three year treasury notes."

"In one day at the height of these subscriptions $34,000,000 worth of these notes was taken by the public. Even in these days of wonderful negotiations such a business would be remarkable. Mr. Cooke had the entire confidence of all the secretaries of the treasury and was frequently called to Washington to consult as to ways and means for the negotiation of these loans. His commission, all things considered, was a very small one, and this he divided most liberally with every broker and bank that acted as subscription agents under him."

"One of the most successful of his negotiations, one that aided the government's credit more than anything else, was his suggestion for the conversion of outstanding quartermasters' vouchers into 7.5 per cent treasury notes. Arrangements were made in this way for more than $50,000,000 of these vouchers, and the money market was thereby relieved from pressure and the government was enabled to fill all of its contracts at a much lower rate than before. The only obligation assumed by those who held vouchers was an agreement not to sell the treasury notes for three months, as otherwise they would have interfered with the regular subscription offerings. Before the three months was up the whole amount was placed and the subscription books closed."

"During the whole of this period of anxiety regarding the government loans I never saw Mr. Cooke lose his faith in himself or, more than that, in the ultimate triumph of the government."

In connection with the floating of these loans Mr. Thomas recounts a conversation which he heard between Mr. Cooke and Israel H. Johnson which led to the members of the Society of Friends becoming large subscribers. Mr. Johnson, who acted as trustee for a great many estates, objected as a friend to subscribing money for war purposes.

"But," said Mr. Cooke, "you cannot object to subscribing money for caring for the wounded in hospitals, and all the friends may subscribe shall be used for that sole purpose." Mr. Johnson at once subscribed.

Once asked how he regained his fortune after becoming at fifty-two years of age practically penniless Mr. Cooke said:

"That is simple enough. By never changing the temperament I derived from my father and mother. From my earliest experience in life I have always been of a hopeful temperament, never having a cloud. I have always had a reasonable philosophy, to believe that in a time and times were better than harsh criticism would suppose. I knew that this American world of ours was full of wealth and that it was only necessary to go to work and find it. That is the secret of my success in life. Always look on the sunny side."

No less noteworthy than his hopefulness was his innate integrity. When $20,000,000 was to be raised in Europe for the Northern Pacific railroad enterprise a meeting to arrange the preliminaries of the affair was held at Mr. Cooke's house in Ogontz, at which one of the chief figures was Baron Gero, the German minister to the United States. Accompanying him were some of the most important bankers of Germany. Here the Northern Pacific scheme was talked over, and upon that evening Mr. Cooke received from them an exchange on Amsterdam for $500,000 in gold as a mere guarantee for an agreement that the bankers present would contribute $50,000,000 to build the Northern Pacific. The negotiations went on, and in the meantime the house of Jay Cooke & Co. held this $500,000 of gold in its vaults.

Two days before the outbreak of the Franco-Prussian war Mr. Cooke received a cablegram notifying him that the $50,000,000 would within forty-eight hours be on deposit in a well known banking house in London. Thus the inception of the Northern Pacific railroad on the broad basis planned by Mr. Cooke and his friends appeared to be assured, but during these intervening days war was declared between France and Prussia, and the guarantee of $50,000,000 fell through.

Mr. Cooke was asked many years later what he did with the $500,000 in gold.

"Why," was the reply, "we paid it back."

One morning in the fateful April of 1865 as the great financier was going to his office in a street car he heard that President Lincoln had been shot. His firm held a vast amount of government office and wired his agents in every city in the north to advance the price of government bonds half a cent. Then he waited until noon and again waited to raise the price of bonds another half cent. He again raised the price in the afternoon, and the next day he kept them on the upward course.

On the second day he wired the treasury department at Washington asking if the government would support him. "Yes, go ahead," was the reply. Everybody was nonplused. Speculators who had gone short on the market could not see why the tragedy in Washington did not break the market. It was Jay Cooke's pluck and promptitude in action which prevented a financial panic.

PRESIDENT'S BEAR HUNT.

Plans For Mr. Roosevelt's Sport In East Texas.

Colonel Cecil Lyon of Sherman, Republican national committeeman for Texas, was at Austin, Tex., recently and had a conference with Governor Lanham in regard to the coming visit to Austin of President Roosevelt, says a dispatch from Austin. Colonel Lyon said he has been advised by Secretary Loeb that the president would arrive at Austin March 30 on his way to San Antonio to attend the rough riders' reunion and upon reaching Houston would make a detour and go to the Big Thicket, in east Texas, for a five days' hunt after bear. Colonel Lyon has made all arrangements for this hunt.

"I have been in correspondence with the natives of the Big Thicket region," Colonel Lyon said, "and they have been stirring around to find the lairs of the black bears which inhabit the wilderness. I am advised that they already have a number of bears stalked out for the president. I do not mean by this that there will be any tame bears palmed off on the president. That would not be permitted. There are plenty of wild bears in the Big Thicket, and the president will be given an opportunity to have some genuine sport."

"Because I have two pet bears at home some people seem to think that I intend to send them down to the hunting grounds for the president. I am willing to show my two pet bears when the hunt is over. I told the president when I saw him the other day in Washington that I had named one of my bears Theodore Roosevelt, and it pleased him. But I am afraid some of his pleasure was lost when I told him that the other bear was named Carrie Nation."

"The only persons who will accompany the president on his trip are Secretary Loeb, Sloan Simpson of Dallas, the president's physician and myself."

A Giant Among Japanese.

Marquis Oyama is a giant among the Japanese. Six feet tall and weighing nearly 300 pounds, he is the national patron of wrestling and of swordsmanship, says the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Notwithstanding the recent honors won by the foreign trained generals—Kuroki, Oku, Nodzu and Nogi—this representative of the samurai class is the idol of the army, which regards him as the embodiment of the spirit of old Japan. Marquis Oyama is the youngest of the empire builders of Japan, among whom Marquis Yamagata and Marquis Ito are best known. He is sixty-two years of age.

Castor Oil For Mummies.

M. Berthelot, secretary of the Louvre museum in Paris, believes that he has discovered the secret of the agent used in embalming in ancient Egypt, says the London Telegraph. After a laborious examination of the sarcophagi, which date back as far as 2500 B. C., M. Berthelot has come to the decision that the oil employed was simply castor oil, such as is still used in Egypt, which has undergone some oxidation, but retained during the long period its preservative qualities.

SIDELIGHTSONSERGIUS

Incidents That Depict Russian Grand Duke's Character.

CONDEMNED BY REVOLUTIONISTS.

Uncle of the Emperor Was Called "Russia's Evil Genius"—Stories of His Rikorous and Harsh Measures. His Experience With a Woolen Manufacturer in Moscow.

The late Grand Duke Sergius of Russia, who was a brother-in-law as well as uncle of the emperor and exercised immense influence at court, was regarded as the most reactionary of the grand dukes and has been called "Russia's evil genius," says the Philadelphia Public Ledger. As governor general of Moscow he was intensely unpopular. His advent as governor general of Moscow was followed by expulsion of the Jews from the central provinces, and throughout his administration his rigorous and harsh measures aroused the greatest hostility, especially among the students.

Two years ago, after the student riots in which many were killed or wounded, several hundred expulsions to Siberia followed under the orders of Grand Duke Sergius and General Treppoff, now governor general of St. Petersburg, then chief of police of Moscow. As there were many threats made against his life, the grand duke was obliged to flee to his summer residence, twenty miles from the city. During the recent strike disturbances the grand duke left the Diskontolny palace, on the outskirts of the city, where he had been living, and took refuge inside the ramparts of the kremlin, where he had since lived in what is known as the Little palace, opposite the famous statue of Alexander II. The trip to the kremlin on that occasion was made at night between solid lines of troops.

The sentence of death on Grand Duke Sergius was contained in a proclamation issued by the social revolutionists of Moscow after the demonstration on Dec. 11 of last year at St. Petersburg was put down. It read:

"If our demonstration at Moscow (Dec. 18 and 19) is crushed in as bloody a manner as that of our brothers of St. Petersburg, then be the guilt thereof upon the head of Grand Duke Sergius and General Treppoff, and we, the committee, in that event have fore-ordained their death."

Much of the responsibility for the catastrophe at the coronation of Emperor Nicholas in Moscow, when several thousand people were crushed to death at the time of the distribution of the imperial gifts, was laid at Grand Duke Sergius' door. It was held that he had not taken sufficient precautions, and the Liberals, after the affair in St. Petersburg of Jan. 22 last, placed the major portion of the blame for that occurrence on his shoulders.

Sergius was born at Tsarskoe-Selo on April 29, 1857. He was married in 1884 to the Princess Elizabeth of Hesse-Darmstadt. As one of the leading spirits in the Russian reactionary party he was credited with being the chief of the malign influences which surrounded the czar, forcing on the war with Japan and repressing all the czar's inclinations to grant the Russian people a more liberal form of government.

One of the reasons why the czar deprived him of the governorship of Moscow was the discovery and publication of the fact that he had looted the Red Cross funds and stolen and sold supplies that had been furnished by public spirited Russians for the comfort of the soldiers in the field.

The most recent "prank" of Sergius, one that threatened to be dangerous, was that of posting placards in Moscow in which he charged that England had incited and aided the revolt in Russia. The grand duke, according to absolutely reliable information from Moscow, turned over the telegram to a Moscow newspaper, which declined to print it, whereupon, by the grand duke's direction, the police placarded it in the streets. The British ambassador at St. Petersburg called the attention of the czar's ministers to the canard and made a protest. Apologies followed, but Sergius continued to post placards and incite further hatred of England.

Another story told of him is that when conducting military maneuvers on a large scale he caused a bridge over the Volga which was packed with troops to be blown up with dynamite. Several hundred soldiers paid with their lives for the blunder, which would have been ridiculous but for the fatal results.

William F. Curtis, the Washington correspondent of the Chicago Record-Herald, wrote as follows of Sergius:

"Early in the Russo-Japanese war Grand Duke Sergius called upon the patriotic people of Moscow for contributions for the sick and wounded in the Russian army in Manchuria, and one of the wealthiest men in that city, who owns several large woolen mills, contributed 100,000 blankets. A few months later he was approached by a commission man, who sold him back the same blankets for about half their value and they were returned to the warehouse from which they had recently been given. Sergius shortly after called upon the public for a second contribution for the relief of sick and wounded soldiers, and the woolen manufacturer sent him 2 rubles, which is about $1 in off money. The grand duke was furious and ordered him arrested and sent to Siberia. The manufacturer, however, was promptly released when an influential friend warned Sergius that the story of the blanket transaction would be published in every newspaper in Europe."

FIGHTING FOR A PASS.

ed by General ... A blustering snowstorm all day ... in a bitter wind, which may mean a further conflict. The region of the Japanese attack is in lightly-wooded and high mountains, favorable to the Russians' operations. The force of Japanese of unknown strength, joined with Chinese brigands, west of Kung Chialin, is still menacing the Russians in that region. The cannonade along the Russian coast has diminished in intensity.

Port Not Blocked.
Vladivostok, Feb. 27.—The report from Tokyo that Russian cruisers had left this harbor and were met by Japanese blockaders and obliged to retire is incorrect. The cruisers occasionally go outside to maneuver, but thus far no blockaders have been seen and there are no evidences of a blockade. Life in the town is quiet and regular, though the streets are less thronged than usual owing to the absence of noncombatants.

Under Martial Law.
St. Petersburg, Feb. 27.—All the Russian railways except the Central Asian have been placed under martial law.

Too late to care a cold after confinement has fastened its deadly grip on the lungs. Take Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup while yet there is time.

CENTENNIAL WEEK

PROGRAM FOR THE EVENT HERE OUTLINED.

Committee Invites Both Criticism and Suggestions—This Gives a Basis for Discussion.

Granville, O., Feb. 27.—The following outline of the order of exercises for Centennial week, next September, is offered by the program committee. Criticism and suggestions are invited:

Sunday, September 3—Union services out of doors or in a large tent, under the auspices of the Presbyterian church, assisted if it so desires, by the church chorus choir, which is preparing Centennial choir.

Monday, September 4—A day of commemoration of the first church of Granville and the work it has done in a century, under the auspices of the Presbyterian church.

Tuesday, September 5—Educational Day, wherein the schools and colleges past and present, shall have entire charge of the exercises.

Wednesday, September 6—Patriotic Day. A day for recounting the military history of Granville and its service to the country during the century, followed by a Camp Fire in the evening.

Thursday, September 7—Granville Day. A purely civic celebration. During the day there may be a procession in open carriages and ox carts of the lineal descendants of the earliest settlers. There might be a dinner spread in a tent by a caterer to which admission is gained by ticket, and after dinner speeches. In the evening a concert.

Friday, September 8—Home Coming Day. A feature of the day may be a basket picnic at Spring Valley, or perhaps, on some part of College Hill, or other accessible place where people shall separate into groups of friends and neighbors, and afterward join together in listening to post prandial addresses. Another concert at the close of this day. One of these two concerts to be of old time singing. The other of modern music.

Saturday, September 9—Fraternal Organizations. Meetings, celebrations, processions and the like, with fire works in the evening and a beacon light on Sugar Loaf.

Sunday, September 10—Union Services again out of doors or in a tent, in which the work of all the churches of Granville and of Welsh Hills shall be represented, each one securing some noted preacher for the day.

If any other interest remains that has not had its day, it can have Monday, September 11. And so we can go on till every one is satisfied. Perhaps that satisfaction will be reached just at this point.

Distinguished speakers may be secured for any one of these days or all of them. There can be public exercises in hall or in church, attended by those who desire, on some part of every day, appropriate to that day's topic. The Local History committee can prepare a program for Granville Day. An exhibition, in the new gymnasium, of the Industries of Granville, past and present, and also of historic relics, will be open every day through the week. Certain days and hours will be announced when an exhibition in Science Hall will be made in the Department of Physics. There will also be opportunities for private gatherings of alumnae or of old friends. Here is an outline which will serve as a basis for discussion.

BITTEN BY HOG

Dora Stout Suffers Painful Injury at Appleton—The Surgeon Took 20 Stitches in Wound.

Appleton, O., Feb. 27.—Dora Stout, a prominent farmer of this place, while loading some hogs preparatory to taking them to market, last Thursday was bitten by one of the hogs. The hog caught his left hand through the slats of the box in which it was enclosed, and lacerated it so it was necessary to take 20 stitches. It also pulled about six inches of the leader of the little finger out. Mr. Stout is suffering greatly from the wound, but it is thought no serious complications will ensue.

the motion in the case of the younger Lingafelter.

The penalty for conviction in a forgery case is from one to 20 years' imprisonment. In case the court should overrule the motion for a new trial in either or both cases, sentence will be pronounced, but may be suspended while an appeal is made to the Circuit court. Should the higher courts confirm the lower court's decision, the defendants must serve their sentence imposed by the Common Pleas judge, but should a new trial be granted the cases would again go to the Common Pleas court where a second trial would take place. Prosecutor Fitzgibbon is confident the higher courts will sustain the verdict, but the defense expresses belief that there was sufficient error to secure a new trial.

RECORDER'S BOOK

CONTAINS ENTRY SAID TO HAVE BEEN MADE BY LINGAFELTER.

Though It Was Nearly Thirty Years Ago That He Was Recorder Entry is in Fresh Ink.

The sensational testimony which was to have been introduced by making a witness of Recorder James W. Rutledge at the trial of James F. Lingafelter, is now known.

Among the records taken to Mr. Vernon was Volume 27 of the mortgage records of the Recorder's office of Licking county, which office J. F. Lingafelter filled for several years.

The present recorder, James W. Rutledge, had been subpoenaed in the Lingafelter case as a character witness for the defendant. The State was prepared to shatter this testimony upon rebuttal, by a record that had been brought to Mr. Vernon by Mr. Rutledge. This record can be found on page 186 of said Volume 27 in the Recorder's office. Upon this page is found the following entry, upon the margin:

"The conditions of the within and annexed recorded mortgage, having been fully complied with, I hereby cancel and release the same this 18th day of July, 1878."

"HENRY MOORE, Administrator Abram Johnson, deceased."

"Attest—J. F. Lingafelter, Rec."
This record was not introduced in evidence for the reason that Mr. Rutledge was not put on the stand as a character witness. But it is claimed that J. F. Lingafelter went into the recorder's office and was allowed the same privilege as any other citizen, to examine the records. In volume 27, which is a record of transactions in the year 1878, there are several releases of mortgages which Lingafelter made while holding the office of recorder, and which he had a perfect right to do at that time.

Some months ago, Mr. Lingafelter is said to have gone into the office, and on the same day Mr. Rutledge picked up Volume 27 to look after another transaction, and the book dropped open at this page and at once he saw the above entry in fresh ink, though it bore the date back in the year 1878. The ink used upon the other portions of this page in the year 1878 is now dry and black, whereas that used in the above entry clearly shows that it has been put upon the page at a very recent date.

The penalty for altering a public record is from one to 20 years.

An Advocate reporter who was shown the above entry asked Mr. Lingafelter for an explanation. Mr. Lingafelter said:

"You may say for me that I never wrote a line in the recorder's office after my term of office had expired."

Cold-Blooded Christmas Giver.

"Well—"

"Well, what?"
"He's the kind of a man that gives his children shoes and overcoats for Christmas presents."—Houston Post.

There is one rational way to treat nasal catarrh: the medicine is applied direct to the affected membrane. The remedy is Ely's Cream Balm. It restores the inflamed tissues to a healthy state without drying all the life out of them and it gives back the lost senses of taste and smell. The sufferer who is tired of vain experiments should use Cream Balm. Druggists sell it for 50 cts. Ely Brothers, 56 Warren st., N. Y., will mail it. rnf
